Subject: AMC Engineers Welcomes New Mechanical Engineer

Message:

Anchorage, AK August 17, 2007, — AMC Engineers announces the addition of mechanical engineer Bart Semmler to its staff.

Previous to AMC, Semmler was part of a design team that developed an affordable, easy-to-use infant monitor called SleepSound, to help prevent cases of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS). The design won a Technical Session Award and the Idaho Research Foundation Innovation Award at the Idaho Engineering Design Expo. A U.S. patent application has been filed for the technology. Semmler holds a Bachelor of Science in Mechanical Engineering from the University of Idaho.

At AMC, Semmler is currently working on the new Kodiak Swimming Pool and on a remodel project for East High School.

AMC Engineers is an award-winning full service mechanical-electrical-security-control systems-telecommunication design engineering firm. Now in its 26th year, AMC provides top-quality, innovative design throughout Alaska.
